D/FW AIRPORT — The clergyman who has counseled and comforted members of the Dallas/Fort Worth Airport community through two airplane crashes and countless personal crises has been ousted after 10 years on the job.

The Rev. Luke Miranda was forced to resign as airport chaplain recently because of what his superiors describe as a reluctance to keep pace with D/FW growth by becoming more active in public relations and fund-raising.

Miranda, a Roman Catholic priest, refused to vacate his $40,000-a-year position at first, saying that members of
